RATIONALE

Heart failure is a serious, debilitating disease affecting more than 25 million people worldwide. Despite advances in the understanding of the disease and new treatment options, the prevalence of heart failure is increasing, and the costs associated with the care of patients with heart failure are skyrocketing. Several lines of research show that, at least in part, the increasing prevalence of heart failure and related comorbidities is secondary to poor implementation of current medical knowledge, that results in sub-optimal prevention and management of the disease. It is therefore imperative to educate medical professionals in order to promote a deeper understanding of heart failure and of its treatment.

GOALS

After attending this meeting participants will be expected to understand:

- 1) The epidemiology of heart failure
- 2) The management of specific subgroups of patients with heart failure
- 3) Surgical options for the treatment of heart failure
- 4) Device therapies for the treatment of patients with heart failure
- 5) Imaging techniques and biochemical tools for the diagnosis and management of heart failure
- 6) Future perspective for personalized medicine and immunomodulatory based therapy of heart failure
